

The Swinging Chime is an instrument that comes from the sound workshop of Auroville (Svaram) in India. It can be swung by the player while it is being played. It looks like a dance. Depending on which figures are swung, it influences the sound. The tones of my chime are modeled on water and have a very calming, harmonious effect. They sound very clear and are long lasting. I use them to introduce and complement a sound treatment.