AUTORE

Ayatollah Dr. Mokhtari was Professor at Qom Seminary, Iran, Graduated from Durham University. As being involved in seminary sciences studies at Qom Seminary, Mokhtari continued his studies in modern sciences, finished high school, and then received a diploma. In 2004, he went to England to pursue a doctorate. In 2008, he succeeded in obtaining his PhD degree in Western Philosophy from Durham University. From then until now, in addition to research and teachings at Qom Seminary and different universities, he has been working with academic and research centers in the fields of philosophy, theology, and religious sciences.

PRESENTAZIONE DEL VOLUME

The present work is a comparative study in which the issue of invocation among divine religions (which have a single origin, destination, and message) has been explored. The comparison between the teachings of the Qur'an and those of the Holy Book (the Old and New Testament) about the philosophy and importance of invocation is the topic of the present work. It is worth noting now in 2025, a jubilee year that is considered the year of generosity and mercy in Catholicism, supplication is the infrastructure for the tangible realization of mercy. We are hopeful that all monotheists receive the divine eternal mercy by praying and supplicating.
