De Thaise keuken

The Thai kitchen

The Thai kitchen reflects the richness of a tropic country in Asia.

Fish, meat, vegetables and herbs are available in countless different variations. All these variations make the Thai menu an bookwork. Our kitchen is originating from central Thailand.

Le Thai Cuisine is a member of TRA (Thai restaurant Association) since 2012. This means that all of our kitchen staff has to be an descendant of Thailand. That is how we can provide an authentic Thai dish.

At Le Thai Cuisine we cook with fresh ingredients and we make it as authentic as it can be, just not that spicy as in some regions of Thailand. We import our ingredients once a week straight out of Thailand.

Our different sauces are home made by the owner. We use fresh ingredients for the sauces. We also make our dishes last minute with a wok pan on a big flame.

This is how the people in Thailand cook so we do the same in our restaurant. Because the preparation time is short, the taste of the fresh herbs and vegetables stay highly good detained. Typical Thai vegetables are the thai eggplant and bamboo. Characteristic Thai herbs are cilantro, garlic, Thai holy basil, Thai sweet basil, green and red chilipepper, lemongrass, Laos root, ginger, lemon leaf and fresh mint. The Thai dishes are given extra taste with fish sauce, oystersauce, chilisauce, coconut milk, lemon and sugar. Experience has taught us that some people have to get used to the specific taste of fresh cilantro. This herb is mainly used to bring the soup (Tom Yam and Tom Kha) and some salads some extra flavor.

The consumption of a meal is a part of the social life in Thailand. In a Thai restaurant it is usual to share the food with the whole table.

To make it a little easier for you, we have chosen a selection of the best dishes the Thai kitchen has to offer. Our advice is to order as a Thai and share!

We are happy to help you, if you have troublechoosing the dishes.

We use no flavor enchancer of preservatives in our dishes.

If you have special wishes or an allergy please let the staff know.

Have a lovely meal.
